WEDNESDAY EVENING, NOVEMB. 21.

The republicans now have a majority of only three in the U.S. Senate, that is, including Senator Davis among the demecrats. That Sena the pressure on account of the discovery of tor, however, still counts himself an independtheir rascalities. A significant fact in this elec ent, and refuses to attend the caucuses of either party; but as he is a fair man, it is but reasonable to suppose that as a general rule he will vote with the democrats, certainly when they have the right so clearly on their side as in the case of the admission of the democratic Sena tors from the States of South Carolina and Lou isiana. This being so, and there being three or four republican Senators who are believed to be honest enough to vote in accordance with their real conviction, irrespective of party prejudices, and several of the ultra radicals being absent, and some of the carpet baggers who are disgruntled with the Administration for its Southern policy, having promised to vote for the admission of Mr. Butler, Mr. Thurman yesterday, influenced by these considerations and hopeful of the success of a justifiable attempt to still further reduce the radical majority, in order to bring that gentleman's case immediately before the Senate, moved that the Committee on Elections, to whom it was referred, and by whom it has been intentionally delayed, be discharged from its further consideration, but did not press his motion because his ranks were not full. We hope, however, he will renew it at an early day, and push it to a conclusion, even if that conclusion be unfavorable, for t will at least designate the radical Senators who hold right in higher estimation than party

The bill making an appropriation of $150,000 for the Paris Exposition, and furnishing ships to carry exhibits to Paris, passed the House of Representatives yesterday. The sum is, comparatively, a small one, and would not, if it were | wealth, were able to gratify their tastes for the the only unnecessary expense to which the peo- | beautiful in art, and to surround themselves with ple of the country are subjected by the Govern ment, amount to much, but, added to the hundreds of other needless expenditures, such, for instance, as the $100,000 for the Sitting Bull Commission, that are made at every session of Congress, the whole constitutes a burden that is oppressive, and one that the peoples' representatives have no right to impose upon them. This is a country in which one man is supposed to have no more privileges than another, and if that be so, why is it that provision is made for bearing the expenses of a few who, for their own advantage, wish to exhibit their goods at Paris? Special legislation is repugnant to the principles of free institutions, and we hope the bill may be defeated in the Senate. If the rich manufactures of the North desire to expose their wares at Paris, let them bear the necessary expense themselves, and not impose the burden upon the taxpayers of the country.

Senator Hoar has introduced a bill in the U S. Senate to apply the proceeds of the sales of the public land, and amounts received from railroads indebted to the United States to the establishment of an educational fund. The money received is to be invested in four per cent, bonds, and to be apportioned by the Secretary of the Treasury to the different States and Territories. We hope this bill or another one with the same | A French dioner, tea and dessert set, "salmon apparent object may pass. The retention by the Government of the public lands is a constant incentive to fraudulent efforts to obtain it, and there certainly never was a time when the States stood in greater need of it. The great difficulty Virginia is now in with regard to her public debt is occasioned by the immense sum she has to raise annually to pay the expenses of educating the negroes set free by the General Government, and the Government could pay no juster debt, and pay it more easily, and with the best result to the whole country, than by immediately giving the State her portion of the public lands.

The lamentable effects of too great indulgence in the use of intoxicating drinks have increased so alarmingly of late that the friends of temperance have been stimulated to renewed exertions. They are now pushing their crusade at every available point, and are receiving effective reinforcements. Gen. An Indiana Girl's Misportune -- Barbara Ebelheir, a young German woman, a raving mapiac, was yesterday placed in jail. Her esse will be acted on by the County Court to day. The history of this young woman is a sid and serious one, and shows the pernicious effects of having dealings with so called fortune tellers. She resided with her parents in Indiana, where her eye fell upon the advertisement of Madam Veit, a fortune teller who resides in New Albaoy, Ind. She visited that place to learn her fortune. It was painted to her in glowing calors. Again and again she visited the madam. and the story was repeated, and she was fre quently told that a bright and happy fortuge was in store for her. Several photographs of young men were shown to her, one of which Richmond, but for some years past rector of a she was assured would be her future husband. church in Canada, has accepted a call to the The young woman believed all this, and pa tiently waited for the promised husband to come and claim her for a bride. She brooded over the matter somuch that a slightly deranged in her mind. At last she determined to start out in search of the promised mate, and selecting Dallas as the spot, arrived here some months ago. Bring industrious and a fine needle worker, she found no difficulty in procuring employment. At first she was employed in the family of R. V. Tompkins, but that gentleman becoming acquainted with her condition and noticing her strange conduct, her services were dispensed with. She then went to work in the family of Mr. Wallace, of the firm of Wallace & Wagner, where she remained un til a few days ago. From that time the mania has taken a deeper hold on her, and Saturday she dressed up in her best apparel and appear ed on the streets. Going to a leading store she addressed a young gentleman in endearing

terms, claiming him as her lover. The young man, who had never seen her before, was very much astonished and mortified. Before leaving, her conduct became so frantic that she was given in charge of an officer. At first the officer did not like to place her in prison, and she was taken to a boarding house on Main street, the landlady of which claimed to have had some experience with issue people. Her conduct there was outrageous, she destroy ing everything she could get her hands on, and smashed the glass in the doors and windows. From this place she was taken to the calaboese where she was as violent as ever. Yesterday she was removed to the jail, as above stated. When our reporter saw her, late in the afternoon, she was sitting on the floor, talking and moaning in a most pitiful manner. At times she converses for a few minutes in a rational manner, and then goes into hysteries. Those who saw her when she first arrived in Dallas say she was a rather fine looking woman. Now she is last failing, and presents rather a baggard appear ance. We learn that the officials will communicate with her relatives in Indiana, informing them of her condition. - Dallas Herald

A special from Tiflis reports that immediately after the capture of Kars 15,000 Russians, under General Melikoff, started for Erzeroum. LONDON, Nov. 21.—The Times' Erzeroum correspondent, in a letter from that place, dated Oct. 25th, says: -"If the winter breaks upon us shortly and Kars holds out, we may keep E.zeroum, but if the weather continues fine and Kars falls this place cannot repel the Rus-

The Manchester Guardian's Pera correspondent telegraphs as follows :- "We have just heard of the capture of Kars. The fall of Erzeroum is expected to follow. The Porte now appears desirous of entertaining peace proposals. Server Pasha, Minister of Foreign Affairs, and Mahmoud Damad are said to be more favorable to peace."

VILLAGE SOCIETY IN WINTER.—First: As to sewing clubs; the work should be carefully restricted to such embroidery, etc., as cannot he dene by women who earn their living by their needle. The justice of this ought to be at once apparent; but it is, as a rule, overlookd. We have known the plain sewing taken from the sempstresses of a village, and given to church clubs, for a winter; the consequence of which was, hungry women asking parish help, and a stained glass window back of the pulpit. Secondly: In reading clubs, let the time for each reader be limited by inflexible rule. If this is not done, there will be found in every such club, at least one dogmatic, selfish reader who will ferce his author and his voice upon the club, notil in disgust and weariness the members fall off and the experiment fails. Thirdly: If we may trench upon a most delcate topic, we would suggest that in merely social combinations, for the purpess of music, dancing or conversation, the old caste lines of the town be disregarded. There is no despotism more parrow or cruel than the aristocracy of a village. New blood and new ideas would generally revivily it; outside of the so-called 'good society' of such a place which has been fenced in for two or three generations, is frequently found the larger proportion of intelligence, culture, and breadth of thought. Fourthly: The great want experienced by cultivated men and women in a small town is of books, periodicals, etc., which, individually, they are not able to buy. There are very few circulating libraries in American towns of a population less than ten thousand. This want can be obviated in a measure, by a friendly combination between certain families or individuals, in which each contributes a given number of books to a common stock; these books are loaned to the members in turn.

A more formal and much better way is the formation of a book club, such as were common in England before the establishment of Mudic, in which each member pays at the beginning a certain sum, with which as many books are purchased as there are members, each one choosing a book; these pass in regular rotation from hand to hand, remaining a fortnight with each reader; twenty books may thus be read for the cost of one. When the books have nov 12 passed around the circle, they are sold to members for the benefit of the club. Fines for de- or nov 14 tention and abuse of books also keep up the funds. No officer is required in this association but a treasurer. Another advantage in the plan is that books can be bought by the quantity at lower rates than singly. The same rule applies to subscriptions for magazines, newspapers, etc. -"Home and Society;" Scribner for December.
